

International Relations

BRIEF FIFTH EDITION

2010–2011 Update

Joshua S. Goldstein Jon C. Pevehouse

"International Relations has long been the best introduction to the field. It perfectly balances different theoretical approaches to international politics, theoretical and empirical material, and major topics like international security, international political economy, and global science issues. In particular, it's coverage of war, civil conflict, and terrorism is outstanding and especially relevant today."
—ANDREW KYDD, University of Wisconsin–Madison

"Students have realized that women—as factory workers, as peace activists, as political thinkers—need to be discussed in IR courses. Goldstein and Pevehouse's up-to-the-minute, engaging introductory text responds to this need."
—CYNTHIA ENLOE, Clark University

"A thoroughly engaging and comprehensive textbook, Goldstein and Pevehouse's International Relations, Brief Edition, successfully guides students in applying IR theory to real-world events. The authors do a masterful job of explaining world affairs and of developing students' ability to evaluate contemporary international policy debates."
—JELENA SUBOTIC, Georgia State University

Thoroughly updated to cover world affairs through 2009, the brief version of International Relations presents the same approach and coverage as the best-selling comprehensive survey but in a streamlined and flexible format. From war and trade to human rights and the environment, this survey explores relations among nations and the influence of transnational actors. Applying three core principles—dominance, reciprocity, and identity—International Relations helps students analyze current events and think critically about them.

"Global Challenges in 2030," a new essay section exclusive to International Relations, focuses on major issues that students will face over the coming 20 years. The eight original essays by leading international relations scholars include:

- Joseph S. Nye, Jr., on "Diversifying American Power"
- Beth A. Simmons on "Institutionalizing Human Rights"
- Shibley Telhami on "Understanding Attitudes on Middle East Peace"
- John Gerard Ruggie on "Governing Transnational Corporations"
- Charli Carpenter on "Securing the Seas"
- Andrew Moravcsik on "Affirming Democracy in International Organizations"
- Daniel W. Drezner on "Regulating Global Complexity"
- Michael W. Doyle on "Democratizing World Politics"

The most up-to-date analysis of world affairs available in any introductory text helps students become more informed about political, economic, and cultural events throughout the world and then go beyond the headlines to see the broader patterns in international relations. In addition to many new photos from the world's hotspots and figures and tables with the latest data, the 2010–2011 update includes the war in Afghanistan, ongoing violence in Pakistan, Iran's nuclear program and internal dissent, new agreements on global warming, the coup in Honduras, efforts to stabilize the global economy, and the replacement of the G8 by the G20 as a coordinating body for world economic decision making.

Readings in International Relations pairs writings on international relations theory with writings on current events to help students explore the relationship between concept and application.
